John's Corner Deli

Everything Plus the Cow

"People say, 'Wow it's amazing you really have everything,' and we really do." David Ji is the new owner at John's Corner Deli, a reliable neighborhood favorite for more than 25 years. Locals may know it simply as "cow store" or "moo mart," thanks to the guardian bovine perched on the roof.

"I like people here," says David, "we have kind neighbors and customers." John's Corner Deli has supermarket selection within easy walking distance. "We carry organic fruits and vegetables and healthy foods," he says, "I like every fruit." Fresh choices include bananas, apples, pineapples, squash, melons, kiwis, tomatoes, potatoes, onions, garlic, lettuce, corn, and several varieties of citrus: mandarin, lime, lemon, and orange.

Planning a meal? John's Corner Deli stocks milk, cheese, sour cream, meats, cereals, pastas, sauces, and other groceries. Busy people can power up with chef salads, egg and veggie sandwiches, turkey croissants, or tuna pockets. Snack up with sweet potato fries, jojos, fruit bars, or mixed nuts, and wash it down with an ice-cold beverage like milk, juice, or spring water.

David's family helps out at John's Corner Deli, including his sister and their 87-year-old mother. "My mom is still very healthy," he says. The family kept the market open 24 hours a day during the January 2012 storm, so snowbound neighbors could pick up essentials. For their time off however, the Ji family makes warmer plans, "We go to the Hot Springs in Olympic National Park," says David, "our whole family enjoys it."
